The Maine Historical Society Quarterly is published at 170 Stevens Hall, University of Maine at Orono, Orono, Maine 04469, and is received by 2015 members and 135 libraries.

Manuscripts relating to any aspect of Maine history are invited. Submissions should reflect original, previously unpublished research done according to acceptable scholarly standards and should not exceed six thousand words. Style and footnotes should be in conformity with A Manual of Style, published by the University of Chicago Press.

The authors of all manuscripts published in the Quarterly become eligible to receive the James Phinney Baxter Award of $100.00. Established to promote excellence in the research and writing of Maine history, the Baxter Award is presented at the discretion of the Editorial Board to the author of the best article appearing in the Quarterly during the volume-year.

The Maine Historical Society assumes no responsibility for the opinions and interpretations expressed by its contributors.

The articles appearing in the Quarterly are abstracted in Historical Abstracts and America: History and Life, published by the American Bibliographic Center.

COVER ILLUSTRATION: Maine's pioneer farmers struggled against thin soil, changeable weather, mounting outside competition, and the disadvantages of their own economic conservatism. Those who did not succumb to “Ohio fever” responded to discouraging conditions by adapting new crop patterns. In this issue, we discuss an adaptation related less to soil, weather, or competition than to international affairs, wartime food shortages, and the gray areas between seeking the best market and aiding the enemy. Why did Penobscot Valley farmers grow wheat? Author Jamie H. Eves provides intriguing answers to this historical puzzle. Cover illustration and illustrations within are from the Maine Farmers' Almanac.
